and getting out of it another. I told him he should rather commit himself to a branch of peace with you. He said, "No; that he would rather have you in gaol." He also said he did not want to see you, that I had seen you and gone down on my knees to you. I asked him his authority for saying so, and he said Mr. Lewis. I heard from Mr. Bandmann that he had recalled your press privileges and advertisement, that you had been getting into the Theatre without paying, and that he intended taking out a summons against you. Mr. Bandmann had called you a scoundrel, a fraud, a cheat and other terms I cannot think of. He is very apt to use terms such as these when nobody is there. I waited on Mr. Bandmann at the Hotel after I received the subpoena; I showed him the subpoena and said that I could not leave the Colony. Mr. Bandmann flew into a violent rage, was behind Miss Beaudot, and said something about a conspiracy. I asked him to repeat the words, and he said if I did not go by the steamer that I would have to take the consequences. (Witness had received the two letters put in from Mr. Bandmann, one of which informed him that Bandmann intended staying some time longer in the Colony, and he was witness to the other members of the company to leave by the Brindisi. The second note was a warning not to heighten the offence. I have been actor and manager from 1854 in America, Australia, New Zealand and Canada. It is not true that I raised my hand to strike Miss Raymond in Calcutta. I never raised my hand against any lady. It is not true that a person of the name of Nunn interposed on that occasion. I have sworn occasionally at the male members of the company, but never towards the women. The expressions and oaths have been used to-day are foul lies. It is not true that I have heard of the great Rousby case; Mr. Bandmann told me that he had had an altercation with a lady about some book. She refused to pay him, and seized the book forcibly from him. In the scuffle she fell against the wings or some part of the stage properties. He told me that all the actors went against him in the trial, that it cost him a great deal of trouble and a large sum of money. He told me a lot of his own impressions. I know Miss Mylford. Her mother placed her in my charge in Bombay where she first appeared. She joined in Calcutta. I have never seen her ill use that lady, but Mr. Bandmann told me that he had done so himself. I spoke to Mr. Bandmann about her being nervous and found a little fault with her, and then he told me that he used some of the most filthy language I ever heard out of a man's mouth. I remonstrated with him, told him it was bad taste, and always told against him. He excused himself by saying that one could never get anything out of a woman unless one frightened her. I never saw him abuse a lady. Mr. Bandmann is in the habit of swearing at his employees; those he can swear at. He discriminates. I have seen the article Tragedy Power very often, in Australia, Calcutta, Shanghai and here. Mr. Bandmann and I have discussed the article together very often. He was very wroth when it appeared in Calcutta first; it was published there by Mr. Carson.

Cross-examined by Mr. Francis: I have caused trouble, but only to myself, in the Company. There have been no complaints made to Mr. Bandmann about my treatment of the other members of the company. There is a gentleman named Arnold in the company. I have frequently used strong language towards him for delaying rehearsals, etc. I called him a fool, threatened to fight him. I figured in the Police Court here for assaulting one of the members of the company who had invited my wife. I was fined $10; that was two days after the insult; I could not find him sooner. Mrs. Ogden did not assault him hot-tempered; she was charged and fined, however. I first got into communication with Mr. Fraser-Smith the second morning after a very hurried interview with Mr. Smith during the interval which occurred between the receipt of the two letters to him. I did not communicate with Mr. Smith during the interval which occurred between the receipt of the two letters to him.

James Parker, examined by Mr. Fraser-Smith: I am first clerk at the Magistracy. On the 16th June, on which day Mr. Bandmann presented a summons for libel against me, I accompanied you to my office to get some documents signed. I left you in the office and went out to go into the Court, on the way to which I met Mr. Bandmann.

Mr. Fraser-Smith: Now tell the jury what conversation took place between you and Mr. Bandmann.

Witness: I am in my position as first clerk to the Magistrates. Object to repeat any communication made to me, as I consider I am privileged.

Mr. Fraser-Smith: I don't think you can object.

His Lordship addressing the witness: I don't think it was made to you in your position as first clerk of the Magistracy. It was made to you as a private individual. Even although it was made to you officially, it cannot object.

Mr. Francis having no objection, the witness proceeded: I used Mr. Bandmann to accompany me to my office, to sign a bond binding him over to appear at the Criminal Sessions. He said to me "Am I to go into the office with that scoundrel, scoundrel?" I remarked that it could not have applied to any one else.

James Hodge, examined by Mr. Smith: I was acting turnkey of Victoria Gaol, and was present at the Police Court, when Mr. Bandmann applied for a summons for libel. After the proceedings I was standing outside in the doorway of the sheriff's office, where you were and Mr. Parker came out and asked Mr. Bandmann to sign a bond. I overheard Mr. Bandmann say "Well, I have to go in where that blackguard scoundrel is!"

George Murray Bain, proprietor and publisher of the China Mail, was called.

Mr. Francis said he understood that Mr. Bain was called with a view to controvert the statement that Mr. Bandmann made in writing on the back of a note put in to the price paid to the China Mail and Daily Press for advertisements. He admitted that it was not a question in the case whether Mr. Bandmann's statement was correct or incorrect.

His Lordship said it seemed to him that if that was the case, it was entirely a side issue.

Mr. Fraser-Smith said that his object was what Mr. Francis had mentioned.

His Lordship said he did not think it would be evidence in the case, as it was one of those questions that could not be entered into.

Mr. Bain then left the witness box, and Mr. Fraser-Smith said that was his case.

Mr. Francis said he purpose to call re-bounding evidence and, in reply to a question from his Lordship, said he would certainly call one witness, and perhaps a second.

His Lordship: It does not matter, Mr. Smith. It is purely incidental. Mr. Band-mann says that you were turned out, and you have dined it. That is sufficient.

Re-examined by Mr. Francis: The Tragedy Power appeared in 78 or 79. It was never published in America. As far as I can remember it made its first appearance in Sydney or Melbourne. It is a fact that I was in partnership with a man named Dave Carson, who reprinted the Tragedy Power article, and sent thousands of copies of it to China and other places.

Louise Beaudot examined by Mr. Francis:

I have been with Mr. Bandmann for three years. I joined him in San Francisco where I had been playing in juvenile parts. I am articled by my mother to Mr. Bandmann because I am not of age. I have been and still am under his instruction. I have always received a salary, but I now receive more because I am a lady. Mr. Bandmann did not compel them to sacrifice the interests of justice and fairness for any cause. He was a good master, but a strict one, and occasionally irritable. He lost his patience with Miss Mylford. I have never seen him call any of the actors or actresses by her first name. I have never seen Mr. Bandmann take either Miss Mylford, Miss Raymond or Miss Ferguson by the shoulders and shake them violently or use language towards them which made them cry. It might have happened that in the case of Miss Nellie Ferguson I may not have been present when that lady was examined as she was made leading heavy woman, a very good position for a girl, after she had been engaged a few weeks. I saw no disturbance at Calcutta between Mr. Bandmann and Miss Raymond. The poor girl was consumptive and three days after was sent to Adelaide. Mr. Bandmann at that time did not use abusive language towards her, nor did he raise his hand to strike her. As a rule I was present at the rehearsals which took place in the cabin of the vessel, and had never seen Mr. Bandmann take hold of Miss Raymond by the arm.

Cross-examined by Mr. Smith: As a rule I was present. I was not always there.

J. Arnold: I joined Mr. Bandmann's troupe in February this year, and have been with the company since. I was in charge of the rehearsals along with Mr. Ogden. I have been present at every rehearsal since I joined the company. The tenor of the learned counsel about the biting of the nurse's ear were simple nonsense, had nothing to do with the case, and Mr. Francis had no right to put it before the jury. There had been a great deal said about justice, but he could not say that a man who had a right to sue before them as an injured individual had injured his reputation, no one could blame him for trying to recover damages. If he (Mr. Smith) had been convicted he should have felt that he was properly convicted, but Mr. Bandmann did not take the ordinary course, but took criminal proceedings most vindictively. Not only had he obtained the assistance of an eminent firm of solicitors, not only did he retain an eminent barrister to conduct his case, but three days before the trial came on he got the leader of the Hongkong bar to conduct his case. By a certain clause in Lord Campbell's Act, it was enacted that in a criminal prosecution for libel where justification was pleaded the prosecutor if successful was entitled to costs. From that they could see Mr. Bandmann's object in obtaining the leader of the Hongkong bar to conduct his case, of having a barrister to call and take down notes, of having an other legal luminary to sit by and take down notes, and the eminent tragedian himself to assist the three legal lights in clinching the case home. Considering that he (Mr. Smith) was unrepresented by Counsel, Mr. Bandmann might have shown greater consideration, and been content with only one barrister. That was not the perfect vindictiveness of the prosecution. They had had it from the first paragraph of the Telegraph that he (Mr. Smith) had been actuated by the most friendly sentiments. Mr. Bandmann had gone about the Colony calling him a blackguard, a scoundrel, and a great many other vile names even after he had sought revenge for the publication of those paragraphs. They had had it from the first moment that the said Daniel Edward Bandmann, the tenor of the learned counsel about the biting of the nurse's ear were simple nonsense, had nothing to do with the case, and Mr. Francis had no right to put it before the jury. There had been a great deal said about justice, but he could not say that a man who had a right to sue before them as an injured individual had injured his reputation, no one could blame him for trying to recover damages. There had been a great deal said about justice, but he could not say that a man who had a right to sue before them as an injured individual had injured his reputation, no one could blame him for trying to recover damages. If he (Mr. Smith) had been convicted he should have felt that he was properly convicted, but Mr. Bandmann did not take the ordinary course, but took criminal proceedings most vindictively. Not only had he obtained the assistance of an eminent firm of solicitors, not only did he retain an eminent barrister to conduct his case, but three days before the trial came on he got the leader of the Hongkong bar to conduct his case. By a certain clause in Lord Campbell's Act, it was enacted that in a criminal prosecution for libel where justification was pleaded the prosecutor if successful was entitled to costs. From that they could see Mr. Bandmann's object in obtaining the leader of the Hongkong bar to conduct his case, of having a barrister to call and take down notes, of having an other legal luminary to sit by and take down notes, and the eminent tragedian himself to assist the three legal lights in clinching the case home. Considering that he (Mr. Smith) had been actuated by the most friendly sentiments. Mr. Bandmann had gone about the Colony calling him a blackguard, a scoundrel, and a great many other vile names even after he had sought revenge for the publication of those paragraphs. They had had it from the first moment that the said Daniel Edward Bandmann, the tenor of the learned counsel about the biting of the nurse's ear were simple nonsense, had nothing to do with the case, and Mr. Francis had no right to put it before the jury. Hongkong Rates of Postage.

(Revised January 1st, 1882.)

In the following Statements and Tables the Rates are given in cents, and are, for Letters, per half ounce, for Books and Parcels, per two ounces.

Newspapers over four ounces in weight are charged as double, triple, &c., as the case may be, but such papers or packets of paper may be sent at Book Rate. Two Newspapers must not be folded together as one, nor must anything whatever be inserted except broad side Supplements. Printed matter may, however, be enclosed, if the whole be paid at Book Rate. Prices Current may be paid either as Newspapers or Books.

Commercial Papers signify such papers as, though written by Hand, do not bear the character of an actual or personal correspondence, such as invoices, deeds, copies of documents, &c. Newspapers, Articles of Dress, Fancy Work, and similar presents are continually being refused, the senders having often spent more in Postage than would have paid the freight by steamer. No refund can be made on such parcels of the value of Stamps obliterated before the nature of the contents was discovered.

Local and Indian Parcel Post.

1. Small Parcels may be sent by Post at Book Rates between Hongkong and any of the British Post Offices in China, as well as to Japan, Macao, Pahkoh, the Straits Settlements, Ceylon and India. They must not exceed the following dimensions, 2 feet long, 1 foot broad, 1 foot deep, weigh more than 8 lbs., not be the smaller than 3 in. by 2 in. Such parcels may be wholly closed if they bear this special endorsement, PARCEL, CONTAINING NO LETTER, but any parcel may be opened by direction of the Postmaster General. In the Case of Parcels for India a declaration of contents and value is required, a printed form for which is supplied gratis. The Registration of Parcels for India and Ceylon is compulsory.

2. The following cannot be transmitted: Parcels insufficiently packed or protected, liable to be crushed (as boxes, &c.) Opium, Glass, Liquids, Explosive substances, Matches, Indigo, Dyestuffs, Ic. Meat, Fish, Game, Fruits, Vegetables, or whatever is dangerous to the Mails, or likely to become offensive or injurious in transit.

3. Parcels are as a general rule forwarded by Private Ship, not by Contract Mail Packet. To India they are forwarded by the P. & O. and Indian Mail Packets only, to Ceylon by P. & O. only. No responsibility is accepted with regard to any parcel, unless Registered, and then only to the amount of $10.

4. The public are cautioned not to confound these facilities with a Parcel Post to Europe, &c., which does not exist.

It is necessary that the following rules be strictly observed.

1. No Letter or Packet, whether to be registered or unregistered, can be received for Postage if it contains gold or silver money, jewels, precious articles, or anything that, as a general rule, is liable to Customs duties.

2. This Regulation prohibits the sending of Patterns of dutiable articles, unless the quantity sent be so small as to make the sample of no value.</
